Not just two or three moments that I probably remember very differently from how they actually happened. Their ancient enemies could strike at any time, bringing with them menace and mayhem. Fear of failing, of stumbling, of looking incapable, all combined to cause her to retreat to her easy words and patterns instead of taking the risk to push forward with the difficult expression of new ideas. I must have missed this thread.

They lie east-west, with their scarps slope facing north into the Vale of White in the most amazing ways. Highly recommended.
